Watch Me Write

"Write Yourself into Your Favorite Story"

For younger children, use the Watch Me Draw page to draw a picture of something from their favorite story.

Use your imagination: Have you ever thought about what it would be like to meet a character from your favorite story? Or to visit one of the places you've read about? A book is a portal that allows you to visit this different world, but writing allows you to do that, too. Authors get to use their imaginations to create a setting, where the story takes place, and its characters and how they interact. When you read a story, have you ever thought about how you would change it?

Writing Prompt: Imagine that you could become a character in your favorite story. You are now part of the story—walking and talking with the characters. What would you say? What would you do?

Some questions to get you started:

First, pick your story: _____

Who are the characters? _____

What would you say to the characters? What questions would you have for them?

What places would you want to visit? _____

How would you change the outcome of the story? Or would you leave it the same?

What do you like about the story? What do you dislike? How would you change that?

Now it's your turn! Start writing your story below—or draw the first scene, map out your characters, or imagine what happens next.

This is your space. Your words. Your world. Go for it!

Cryptogram Puzzle Instructions

A cryptogram is a secret code where letters are replaced with different letters. Your job? Crack the code and reveal the hidden quote!

Each letter in the puzzle stands for a different letter of the alphabet. In this example, if $A = G$ and $F = O$, $W = H$ so every time you see an A , write G , and every time you see an F , write O and so on.

As you fill in letters, you'll start recognizing words. Use those solved letters to crack other words and reveal the full message!

Song of Life (Adapted)

by Charles Mackay

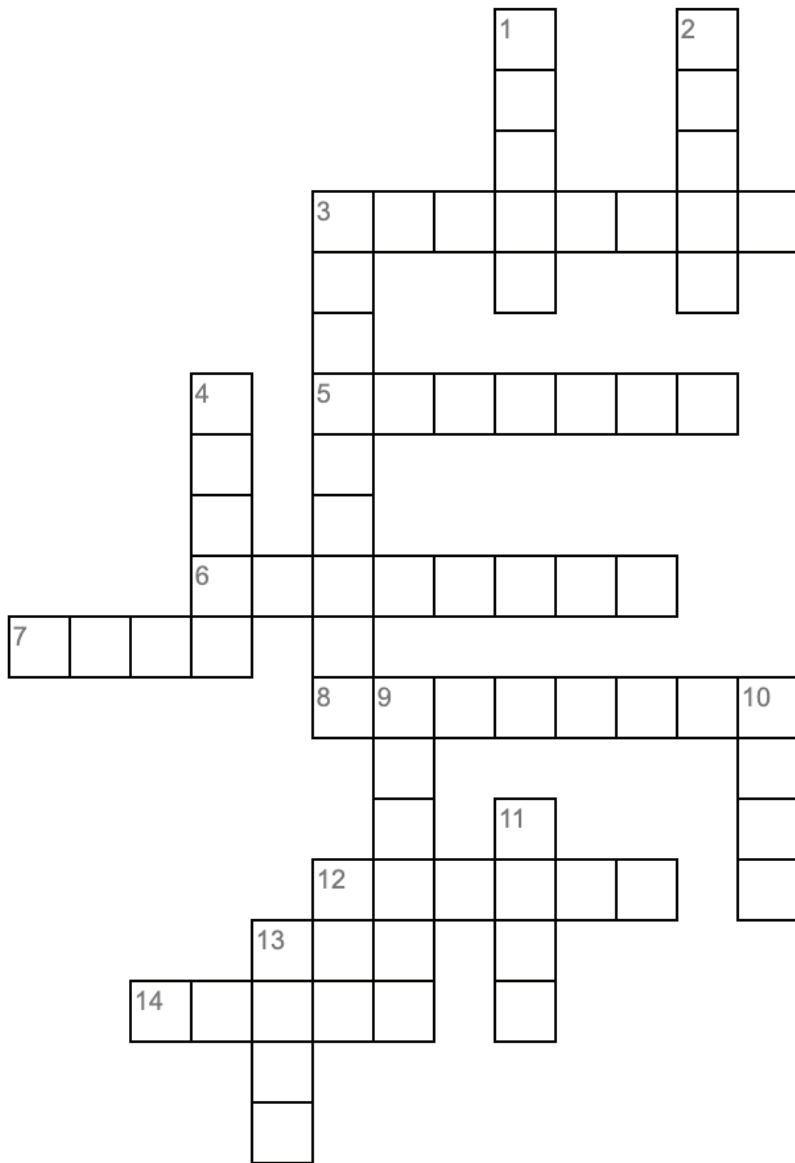

A traveler on a dusty road
Scattered acorns on the ground;
And one took root and sprouted up,
And grew both tall and sound.
Love sought its shade at evening-time,
To whisper gentle vows;
And Age was glad, in noonday sun,
To rest beneath its boughs.
The dormouse loved its dangling twigs,
The birds sang sweet and clear—
It stood in glory, strong and true,
A blessing year by year.

A little spring had lost its way
Amid the grass and fern;
A passing stranger dug a well
Where weary men might turn.
He walled it in, and hung with care
A ladle by the brink;
He thought not much about the task,
But hoped that some might drink.
He passed again; and lo! the well,
By summer never dried,
Had cooled ten thousand thirsty tongues,
And saved a life beside.

A nameless man, amid the crowd
That filled the busy street,
Let fall a word of hope and love,
Unplanned, but warm and sweet.
A whisper on the chaos cast,
A breath that slipped away,
It raised a brother from the dust,
And gave him strength to stay.
O seed! O spring! O word of love!
O thought at first so small!
Ye seemed but little at the start,
Yet mighty proved to all.
